ON A LONG JOURNEY.

Woman and Six Children on Way to Colchester.

The Middletown Press says: On Sunday morning they arrived here on the way to Colchester a woman and her six children.

They had started from Buffalo at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning, and intended to join the husband of the woman and the father of the children at Colchester. He had preceded them by a week. All the children were comparatively young and only one of them, a boy, could speak English. The family was without money and there was no train that would get them to Colchester Sunday afternoon. The attention of Officer Kincaid was called to them, and he talked to the mother through the oldest boy, the only one who could speak English. They had no money with which to board in town over night, and there seemed to be no way they could reach Colchester.

McCarthy called the attention of William Gromka, his neighbor, to the case, when he went home, and Officer Kincaid planned to inform Father Maciel of the presence of the woman and the children here without money. Mrs. Gromka interested herself in the family and made immediate arrangements to have them taken to Colchester in a conveyance, so that they could be united with husband and father Sunday evening. The party had started from Buffalo with a basket of food, but no money, their tickets to Colchester being their most valuable possession. The woman had a small oil stove which she used to heat milk for the baby on the way. They were very glad to get to their future home in Colchester.
